TEACHING

AREAS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Since finishing my Ph.D. I have had the opportunity to teach in several post-secondary institutions – York University, The University of Toronto, Okanagan University College and University of British Columbia Okanagan – each with their distinctive academic communities and cultures. During this period I have taught courses in Geography on topics ranging from “research methodology”, “global processes and environments” and “population” to “geography of housing” and “human”, “urban” and “social geography”. As well, I have supervised students at the M.A./ Ph.D. level.

SCHOLARLY AND PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

AREAS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

In terms of my research interests, these have gradually evolved over the years from an early focus on the Portuguese group to my current interest in different immigrant groups and research topics – ranging from housing issues to ethnic entrepreneurship – as well as to the use of a variety of research methods. My research interests today include urban and social geography, with an emphasis on migration processes, community formation, housing and neighbourhood change, ethnic entrepreneurship and the social structure of Canadian cities.
